KILLED AT MCHENRY.

Jack Tharp Tried to Take Charge of a Saturday Night Dance at Hamilton.

BUT IS PREVENTED BY ARCH CAMPBELL.

The Row Brought up on the Railrod After the Dance was Over, When Campbell Shot Tharp, Killing Him Instantly.

FIGHT IN SKIR HALL.

Jack Tharp was shot and instantly killed at McHenry last Saturday night by Arch Campbell. It seems that the trouble that finally culminated in Tharp's death was started at a dance given by the Hamilton Miners. The ball was made of entertainments at the dance, and soon after the dance had ended, the deceased in company with the other officers of the band, Robert Tharp arrived and invited them to allow to take a prominent part in the dance, to all of which Campbell objected, and asked that they desist and leave the hall. The band, however, would not do this, and started at Campbell, but the intervention of those present prevented further trouble.

The fuses of the house over, and those who went to the door were sent to the rear, and the band, with their instruments, left the hall.

When all had left, the band started to play again, and when the band had stopped, the band, with their instruments, left the hall.
